BIRDS AS BAROMETERS.

Change Color With Weather and Are Declared Never to Make Mistakes.

With a collection of boars' tusks, rhinoceros horns, bows, poisoned arrows, darts, spears, leopard's skin and strange birds, the Swedish bark, Norrkoping, cast anchor off Stapleton, S. I., yesterday after a trip of ninety-two days from Pemba Bay, Portuguese East Africa. Friends of the crew put off from shore, and soon the sailors were waltzing on deck with pretty girls to the music of that universal solace and friend of the dep water rover, the accordion.

In a cage of Norse architecture slept lazily on their perches a flock of small birds of about the size of canaries, once gaudy ornaments of the mangrove trees of the East coast, but now sobered in color and temperament and abbreviated in plumage by climatic changes.

Capt. C. P. Mattson interrupted a game of seat with his officers in the after cabin to tell of the wonderful things he had seen at Pemba Bay. Attracted by beautiful little birds with long, curving, gaudy tail feathers, like birds of Paradise, he bought a collection of them. They were many-colored, sweet-voiced and clung to the bark of the Mangrove.

A few weeks' experience afloat showed the Captain that these strange little creatures were both barometric and thermometric. They kept changing color as the ship progressed north and their beautiful tail feathers all came out. After the Norrkoping had crossed the equator the birds had become a sober gray, black and mottled color. They yellow in sunshine and turned dark at the approach of foul weather.

The birds had the faculty, also, of mesmerizing Tom, the ship's Swedish cat, which never offered to touch them. The Norrkoping started with a lot of goats, chickens and a monkey, but the crew ate the goats and the chickens and the monkey, while gambling along the bulwark, gave a jump at the same moment the ship gave a lurch and it was a good-bye to Mr. Monk.

While at Pemba Bay the captain, and two German residents, sometimes took a catboat to the opposite side of the two-miles-wide bay and camped out in a clearing in the forest, where protected by mosquito netting they were lulled to sleep by the roar of leopards, the grunting of wild boars, the snorting of river horses, the hissing of snakes and the humming of mosquitos.

In that strange country birdseed grows upon cobs, and when the steward of the Norrkoping fed the feathered barometers yesterday he just placed an unshelled ear of birdseed within each cage.

Squeezed by Snake.

While Mrs. John Hackett, of near Providence, was gathering blackberries near her home last week she was attacked by a huge bull snake over six and a half feet long, which ran at her with its head nearly two feet in the air, and after encircling her several times, wrapped itself firmly around her body it was only super-human strength, born of nerve, which enabled her to tear loose from its embrace. She not only tore it loose from her body but killed it with a stick which she grabbed as soon as she could get to it. Altho badly frightened Mr. Hackett was not otherwise hurt.

Hogwallow News.

Early vegetables should be planted before sunrise.

If at last you don't succeed try somebody else.

Bat Smith has planted two acres of mint adjoining his moonshine still house.

Tobe Mosley's cow and mule have become the laughing stock of the community.

Caution: Be careful and do not leave your mouth standing open after you stop talking.

Sidney Hocks dreamed last night that he was in trouble of some kind, and it was so real that he woke up and found himself in the Tickville jail.

Raz Barlow came in yesterday in fairly good condition, with three jugs of Moonlight Reel. He also carried a tobacco stick to keep off the snakes with.

The roof of the Wild Onion school house leaked on the teacher, the other day, and he has moved his class out in the sunshine until he gets dry.

The Gimlet creek widder, we understand, has changed her mind about marrying Luke Mathewsia and is cleaning the bushes off the grave of her last husband.

Several restless members of the Hog Ford church were observed climbing out at the windows while the sermon was going on last Sunday. Hereafter the preacher will fasten down the windows till he gets done.

The sun crossed the equator on Friday of last week. Several of our citizens gathered on Musket Ridge with smoked glasses and enjoyed the sight very much.

While crossing the Gander creek bridge Thursday the wind blew Yam Sim's large yellow wool hat off into the water and he was forced to continue on his way to the still house bareheaded. Saturday morning however Frisby Hancock caught a catfish and upon opening it up found the hat inside.

Miss Flutie Belcher has received a nice flask of perfume from Tickville and there will be no need of any flowers to be raised in this vicinity this year. She scattered some of it on the postmaster and he now smells like a patch of roses on a June morning. Since this springtime odor has pervaded the atmosphere, green leaves have appeared and there is every sign of the appearance of spring.

Atlas Peck was arrested for obtaining a jug of lick under false pretenses—claiming he was going to get drunk on it instead of using it for medicine—and was put in the cistern near the postoffice, as the closest jail to Hogwallow is at Rye Straw. The cistern is very deep and water-proof, and the defense will have to rest until the trial comes. After Atlas had dropped into a sound slumber last night the Excelsior Fiddleing Band gathered around the cistern and played "Asleep in the Deep."

Washington Hocks has a muley cow that is so lazy in the summer that cream won't even rise on her milk, and she can be seen any time leaning against the shady side of the stable. While she is thus enjoying herself, the flies and gnats swarm about her, worrying her so she has to sometimes move and Wash was forced to invent an arrangement that will both keep her awake and scare the flies off. He calls it "Hocksies Star Fly Alarm." It consists of the following simple contrivance: An extra size cow bell is placed on the cow's neck, hanging in a downright position; then a string is tied to the clapper and extends back to the tail, where it is tied in a hard bow knot. The cow then goes to sleep, the flies come, the cow switches her tail and the bell rings which frightens the flies away.

While walking through the woods one day a man found a pint of whisky in a hollow log. There was moss on the bottle and the lick was very old. The man drank some of the whisky and owing to the mellowness he did not get drunk at once then and there, but was able to go a half mile before he began to walk with uncertainty in his foot-steps. He then took another big swiggle of this corn nectar and the bottle was empty. He then laid down on the creek bank for a long time and he had dreams and in his dreams he caught some very large fish and a snake as long as a fence rail. Then he woke up and did not feel well. Moral: He should have saved some of it for next morning.

Love Me Now!

If you're ever going to love me, Love me now while I can know All the sweet and tender feelings Which from real affections flow.

Love me now while I am living, Do not wait till I am gone, And then chisel it in marble— Warm love words on ice cold stone.

If you've dear, sweet words about me Why not whisper them to me? Don't you know 'twould make me happy And as glad as glad can be?

If you wait till I am sleeping, Ne'er to wake here again, There'll be walls of earth between us And I couldn't here you then.

If you knew someone was thirsting For a drink of water sweet, Would you be so slow to bring it— Would you step with laggard feet?

There are tender hearts all 'round us Who are thirsting for our love; Why withhold from them what nature Makes them crave all else above?

I won't need your kind caresses When the grass grows o'er my face; I won't crave your love or kisses In my last low resting place.

So, then, if you love me any, If its but a little bit, Let me know it now while living, I can own and treasure it.

Letter from Kansas.

Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., July 22, 1907.

Editor Record-Press, Marion, Kentucky.

Dear sir: If you will allow me space in your valuable paper, I will try to give your readers a few items from Ft. Leavenworth that may prove to be of interest to some.

I left old Kentucky July 16, and arrived at Ft. Leavenworth the 18th. It made me feel sad to think that I was leaving so many loved ones behind, probably some of them I shall never meet again, as I shall not return for at least three years. But I wish them all good luck.

Saturday was a historic day for Ft. Leavenworth, with a gala excursion of more than three thousand people from Kansas City and the arrival of the thirteenth cavalry from Ft. Sill, Oklahoma. There was never such a crowd as that which thronged the parade, sidewalks and public buildings.

On arrival at the Ft, the picnickers marched to the west end parade, where they had lunch, after which an athletic meet, consisting of jumping, foot racing and other athletics, in which prizes were competed for, was held. Next came a base ball game played between two picked teams of the excursionists, after which the younger element proceeded to the spacious gymnasium where they danced to their hearts content to music furnished by the eighteenth infantry band under the leadership of Prof. Garyean.

Then came the final races. The soldiers for the souvenirs and not less than a dozen were very noticeable with seven or eight ornaments adorning their peek-a-boo waists. This, however, was not the only amusement, for as one young lady was heard to say "goodbye" to her soldier escort another exclaimed. "I am very much put out and I think its a shame that I have come all the way to Fort Leavenworth and have not even so much as seen the 'Fort.'" The train whistled, the bell rang and the picnic at the post was over. The excursion was given under the auspices of the Clerks Benefit Society and was its first annual outing.

Troop I. K. L. and M., of the squadron of the thirteenth cavalry, consisting of 7 officers, 187 enlisted men, 1 contract surgeon and 3 hospital corps men with 229 horses and mules, arrived at the post yesterday at 12 o'clock, with Maj. Chas. W. Taylor in command, after having marched from Big Stager that morning, a distance of fourteen miles. The journey to this post, which began at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma, more than thirty-five days ago, was a long one. A distance of more than 500 miles, being a greater distance than has ever been made by U. S. troops in time of peace.

Although the trip was made under the greatest difficulty and trying circumstances, brought about by the heavy rains, mud and intense heat, the troops made a fine appearance and but few looked fatigued from their long journey. The animals looked as well as could be expected, considering that they have been in the harness and under the saddle throughout the period.

I will close with best wishes and kindest regards to all who read the Record-Press. Respectfully, B. E. WOODY.

Cured Hay Fever And Summer Cold.

A. J. Nusbaum Batesville, Ind., writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed to only aggravate my case. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar and it quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." J. H. Orme

Stock Barn of J. E. Crider Burned.

The large stock barn and silo of J. E. Crider at Fredonia, were burned to the ground yesterday afternoon. About one hundred and fifty tons of new clover hay which had been stored away in the loft of the large barn was also destroyed.

Mr. Crider is the proprietor of the Fredonia Valley Creamery, and therefore milks about sixty-five cows, and all were in the stalls of the barn ready to be milked when the fire was discovered, which was about three o'clock. Fortunately the cows were all rescued with injury to any of them.

The fire originated in the hay loft and Mr. Crider is of the opinion that it was caused by spontaneous combustion. The loss is said to be over $3,000, with about $1,500 insurance.

This is said to be one of the largest stock barns in western Kentucky and Mr. Crider has the sympathy of his many friends in his misfortune.—Princeton Leader.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, I uniformly cure all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend
